

"THE SORROWS OF THE VACATIONLESS"

"Banbury Tarts."

Make a rich puff paste and cut it into pieces 6 inches square. In the center of each square put a great spoonful of currant, raspberry, strawberry or gooseberry jam. Pinch the four corners of the square together that the fruit may not ooze out. Drop the tarts carefully into a kettle of deep, boiling fat and fry quickly to a delicate brown. Drain in a colander lined with tissue paper.

These are the celebrated "Banbury tarts" of English folk-lore.

There was a young lady of Fargo,
Who said: "I will sure make this car go."

She coaxed the machine
With a tub of benzine—
The funeral march was the Largo.
